We are unable to continue processing your 2021-2022 application for financial aid as it contains incomplete or conflicting information. We need clarification about who your responsible parent is and that parent's marital status as of the date you and your parent signed the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

Federal guidelines for determining which parent is your responsible parent are as follows:

Your responsible parent is the parent with whom you lived the most during the 12 months before your financial aid application was signed. If you did not live with either parent, or you lived with each parent an equal number of days (including zero days), your responsible parent is the parent who provided you the most support in the most recent 12-month period. Support means gifts, loans, housing, food, clothing, car, money, medical and dental care, payment of college cost, etc.

According to the above definition, as of the date my original 2021-2022 FAFSA was signed, my responsible parent was _____ .
